Raleigh Food Co-Op and Community Gardens is a small 2.5 acre farm established to educate the local community about food options and resources. "Our members learn that their food comes from hard work, patience, and knowledge of our local ecological systems and surroundings; not a store" says Ben Keefer, the community gardens founder. "We also have great programs like Grow Our Own Food (GOOF) for the local school system, as well as, state of the art Aquaponics (a mix of hydroponics and aquaculture)."
